

It is my understanding that this regulation might impringe on the the Indiana AG's Telephone Privacy program. While I am seldom in favor of anything that impinges on free speech or trade it is clear to me that the telemarketing industry is unable to regulate itself in an effective and responsible manner. I was getting 2-3 calls an evening, frequently from firms who had already called earlier in the week and occasionally even the same evening. I frequently got calls from credit card companies that I was already using. The Indiana AG's program effectively eliminated what had become a terrible intrusion to my home life. Please carefully consider my rights to privacy and quiet enjoyment of my home before you enact anything that turns these parasites lose again.
